About our Christmas shop

Each year, The Brain Tumour Charity has a range Christmas cards and gifts, which are sold through our online shop. Christmas sales are a vital source of income for The Charity, with all profits helping us to beat brain tumours sooner.

You can take a look at our Christmas range on our online shop.

How can you help?

To help us spread the word about The Charity’s Christmas products, each year we’re supported by a group of Christmas Angels, who promote or sell our Christmas cards and gifts in their local networks, raising much needed funds for, and awareness about, our work.

Whether it’s family, friends, colleagues or neighbours—the further you can spread the word, and some Christmas cheer, the better! You can get involved in any or all of the following ways:

• Directing people to our online shop to order cards directly
• Raising awareness of our online Christmas shop by talking to friends and family and on social media
• Collecting details of multiple orders locally, or within your workplace, and making an order and then distributing them
• Buying a bulk order from our online shop, selling cards locally and recouping the funds

Practical considerations

This role can be carried out from home and the time commitment is low. The role is flexible and you can choose how much or little you do. We’ll provide you with copies of our Christmas brochures, a sample pack of cards and some ideas, to get you started.

What impact will you have?

The Christmas period is an important fundraising opportunity for The Charity, and our online shop is a key income stream during this time. You will be playing a key role in contributing to the funds raised through Christmas sales, which will go towards improving the lives of people who are affected by a brain tumour diagnosis.
